

Flowchart for COVID-19 testing due to symptoms

* People who are already in quarantine when they develop COVID-19 symptoms are isolated and household members are in quarantine until test results are available.

 Children of primary school/child care age who only have a runny nose and are in general good health without other symptoms of new respiratory tract infection do not need to stay at home.

 For children of primary school/child care age who have mild symptoms, observe the symptoms at home before testing. If they recover quickly, they can return to school/child care without being tested.

* Mild residual symptoms after a respiratory tract infection (such as persistent cough and runny nose) can be ignored.
